Important!

Dear Sir:—For the last Sale of the Season, there has been provided for you two distinct treats. First: The Campbell collection, rich in fine Americana, numbering among its lots as it does the rare Stella of '79, the almost unpurchasable Stella of '80, the D. Mint Dollar of 1857, as well as a nearly complete series of all values from 20c. down to the half-cent. These coins are one and all notable for their fine condition. Second: The Oriental Collection of Wun Hi Gin, which is probably the finest aggregation of "Celestial" coins ever brought to this country. This superb collection has been specially catalogued by Daniel F. Howarth, the eminent English numismatist, and its condition and rarity have been passed upon by a corps of experts in Chinese numismatics. Some day the Imperial coins of China will be collected almost as ardently as are their contemporary Macedonian, Selucia, Ptolemaic, Roman and Mediæval numismatic monuments, and then collectors who have secured rarities at an early stage will find themselves among the envied. This collection contains coins of every Chinese Emperor, King, and Rebel Chief who has contributed to history in the Flowery Land since the dawn of history, comprising many of the rarest and undoubtedly unique "ounces" or cash, as they are popularly called. The series of dated coins of the Song Dynasty and Provincial issues of later ones are unrivalled in any cabinet. The coins of the Emperor K'ang Hsi are those of one who himself was a numismatist of no mean order and whose catalogue of his own coins and those of his predecessors is still the standard work of reference in China. Many centuries passed before the fact was fully established that under the name of Seres, the Chinese carried on commerce with both the Greeks and Romans. The very name of China, Tsin, is applied to it by Eratosthenes, Librarian of the Alexandrian Library, and Ptolemy Euergetes, who calls it Thinai, and the record exists of the voyage of a caravan under one Marinus of Tyre, a Macedonian merchant from Hieropolis to Honan, the then capital of China, in the second century B.C. The Chinese language and paleography betray a thousand startling analogies to Western models when closely studied. Who can fail to see in the Chinese symbol for "ounce" on the early coins, the species of trident present on all Bactrian coins? The Roman and Chinese numerals are in part identical. The Chinese word which forms the root of "money," and almost every word pertaining to finance, means the "cowry" or wampum shell. Even the common name Yuan (Hgwong), which is that of several Dynasties and Emperors, indicates "first" and is the original root of our "John" as well as uno, un, one, and probably also of "Cain" the first-born. It will be noticed that the coins of many early Emperors are issued with the ancient classical characters of the literati for use in the Capital and University Towns, while the rest are in ordinary Chinese.

Kindly peruse our offer on last page of Catalogue and act promptly.

THE CHINESE EMPIRE

Explanations and abbrevations. In describing each coin the Dynasty appears as the heading. The Era comes next to the lot number, then the Emperor. When impossible to supply, a long dash indicates the fact. The rarity of each piece is indicated by R. 1 to R. 6. R. 1 = fairly scarce. R. 6 = unique. These coins are each and every one in envelopes, fully described, and each one bears the owner's signature of guarantee. Collectors are cautioned against allowing themselves to be befogged by previous catalogues which give the names of Emperors manufactured out of the mere names of sentiments in values, taking the four characters as names of Emperors where only two could possibly have been used. The spelling which we give is the reformed spelling which has been adopted by the highest authorities, notably Sir Hallday McCartney, during the past 30 years. For example—old = Ngwong, new for same Yuan.

THE CAMPBELL—WUN-HI-GIN COLLECTIONS.

A De Luxe Edition of the above, priced in red ink and limited to 100 numbered and signed copies will be issued after the Sale. They will have a genuine Chinese coin attached and on the cover of each and every one will be an original Chinese India-ink drawing by Wun Hi Gin together with his signature. Price, 60 cents cash with orders, which will be filled as they are received. Twenty copies bound beautifully in red cloth and containing after each lot its Chinese symbol, done in red ink, price $5.00 each; or the same, unbound, $3.00 each. Five copies, bound in Japan vellum, hand tooled, gold edges, portraits of owner and cataloguers, price $25 each. As the Catalogue will be a strictly up-to-date text-book of the Coins of China, collectors should get their orders in early. As we have determined that every collector shall have one of the priced Catalogues, if you don't feel like accepting above, return the Catalogue sent to you before Sale and for 35 cents the Chinese portion will be priced. Anyway, as the Chinese say, Fi Tee. There are left just two copies of the de Luxe "History of the Dollar" Sale which took place July, 1905. They are priced in red ink, contain portraits of owner and cataloguers, all press notices and names of purchasers. Bound in blue and gold Japanese vellum, gold edges. Price, $50 each.
